(p.20)
Loyola University Chicago School of Law is a student-focused law center inspired by the Jesuit tradition of academic excellence, intellectual openness, and service to others. Our mission is to educate diverse, talented students to be responsible leaders in a rapidly changing, interdependent world; to prepare graduates who will be ethical advocates for justice and the rule of law; and to contribute to a deeper understanding of law and legal institutions through a commitment to research, scholarship, and public service.
The School of Law has kicked off its second century of excellence in legal education—and we have much to celebrate this year.

Our constantly evolving curriculum, including new degree and certificate programs, keeps us ahead of the curve in legal education trends. We continue to enjoy overwhelming support from our alumni, and are grateful for the three naming gifts the School of Law received this year, including the largest single gift in the school’s history. Our top-notch faculty welcomes several accomplished professors who are building our sphere of expertise, including the inaugural holders of two prestigious new chairs.

Looking ahead, we’re pleased to announce expansion of our experiential learning and the launch of a fifth clinic, the Health Justice Project.

You’ll read more about these initiatives in the fall issue of Loyola Law.

I hope you’ll enjoy reading about these and other recent accomplishments in this report. The generous partnership of our graduates and friends makes all of these achievements possible, and our Honor Roll of Donors on page 30 recognizes this essential support.

We welcome your continued engagement with and participation in the Loyola law community. Visit LUC.edu/law to learn more.

Dean and Professor of Law
Honoring the Distinguished Careers and Financial Support of Our Alumni

The School of Law, which aims to build lifelong connections, is pleased to have the ongoing loyalty and support of so many of its graduates. During the 2009–10 academic year, the law school named the building and two key initiatives in recognition of the remarkable professional success and continuing support of several of its alumni.

Phil H. Corboy Law Center

Longtime School of Law supporters Philip H. Corboy (JD ’49) and his wife, Mary A. Dempsey, made the largest single gift in the law school’s history last fall. In recognition of Corboy’s inspiring career and ongoing dedication to Loyola, the law school’s building at 25 E. Pearson St. was renamed the Philip H. Corboy Law Center.

Corboy is a founding partner of the Chicago law firm Corboy & Demetrio and is widely recognized as one of the greatest trial lawyers of his generation. His leadership and generosity over the years has been instrumental in enabling Loyola’s School of Law to maintain its strong reputation of educating trial lawyers. In 1995, Corboy created the Philip H. Corboy Fellowship in Trial Advocacy program at Loyola to support those students who plan to pursue careers as trial lawyers. As a result of this exceptional program, more than 100 Loyola law students have received scholarship assistance, in addition to some of the best advocacy training in the nation.

A special building dedication of the Philip H. Corboy Law Center was held earlier this year.

Power Rogers & Smith Ceremonial Courtroom

Alumni Joseph A. Power Jr. (JD ’77) and Todd A. Smith (JD ’76) have extended a history of strong support for the School of Law with a gift in excess of $2 million.

In recognition of their gift, as well as these graduates’ dedication and commitment to excellence in the practice of law, the School of Law’s new state-of-the-art ceremonial courtroom has been named the Power Rogers & Smith Ceremonial Courtroom, after their law firm.

Power Rogers & Smith, of which the two Loyola alumni are founding partners, is one of the top personal injury law firms in the United States. The firm, which specializes in medical malpractice, product liability, and wrongful death cases, was voted the number-one law firm in Chicago by Chicago Magazine and the number-one plaintiff’s law firm by Chicago Lawyer. Power was voted the top injury attorney in Illinois and one of the top Chicago injury attorneys in an article published in Chicago Magazine. He has been listed annually in the Best Lawyers in America publication for the past 20 years, selected for inclusion in the Illinois Super Lawyers list for the past five years, and named among the top 10 of all Illinois Super Lawyers since its inception. Todd Smith currently serves as president of the Illinois Trial Lawyers Association and is a former president of the Association of Trial Lawyers of America and the Illinois State Bar Association. In 1998, he was voted Chicago Lawyer magazine’s Person of the Year, and is listed annually in the Best Lawyers of America publication.

Located on the 10th and 11th floors of the Philip H. Corboy Law Center, the Power Rogers & Smith Ceremonial Courtroom is a center of law school activities. Tomorrow’s advocates are trained there, and many of the School of Law’s programs, conferences, and events are hosted in the space.

Dan K. Webb Center for Advocacy

Dan K. Webb (JD ’70) has marked his ongoing commitment to the School of Law with significant contributions through the years, including a major financial commitment this past spring.

To honor Webb’s distinguished career and contributions, the School of Law has named its nationally recognized Center for Advocacy after him.

Webb has spent his entire career as a litigator and trial lawyer. He was named top litigator in the U.S. by Euromoney’s Guide to the World’s Leading Litigation Lawyers, the top white-collar criminal defense attorney by Corporate Crime Reporter; and the top business litigator in Chicago, in Illinois, and in all areas of law by Leading Lawyers Network. He has been selected one of the “100 Most Influential Lawyers in America” and a “Winning Attorney” by The National Law Journal. Webb is chair at the Chicago law firm Winston & Strawn, where he concentrates his practice in the areas of major commercial litigation and white-collar criminal defense.
We welcome the newest members of our community—the incoming class—as we congratulate the bright and talented Class of 2010, which has just set forth to pursue diverse careers in private practice, business, government, the justice system, and other areas. Here are snapshots of the first-year class and some of our recent graduates.

A Diverse and Accomplished Entering Class

The School of Law received 5,538 applications this year—up 30% from last year—and is pleased to report a record 29% minority enrollment. Other demographic highlights of the first-year class:

Leading the Way with Centers of Excellence

Dedicated to the highest standards of teaching, research, service, and policy development, the School of Law’s Centers of Excellence take an integrated, interdisciplinary approach to significant issues affecting the law today. Here are highlights of the past year from several of the centers.

Dan K. Webb Center for Advocacy

New name further strengthens Loyola’s top advocacy program

The Center for Advocacy at Loyola University Chicago is a centerpiece of the School of Law and one of the most respected advocacy programs in the country. Since its founding in 1908, Loyola has produced many of the most accomplished trial and appellate lawyers in Chicago and across the nation. Renamed the Dan K. Webb Center for Advocacy this spring, the center recently has added to its rich curriculum an LLM degree in trial advocacy, appellate advocacy, and alternative dispute resolution for both aspiring and experienced litigators to develop and perfect their skills.

Other advocacy highlights include another year of remarkable success for Loyola’s student teams in regional, national, and international advocacy competitions (also see page 16) and the induction of Barry Sullivan as the School of Law’s Cooney & Conway Chair in Advocacy. Sullivan is a leading scholar, lawyer, teacher, and university administrator who joined the Loyola faculty in 2009. The Cooney & Conway Chair in Advocacy at Loyola University Chicago School of Law was established by John D. Cooney (JD ’79), Robert J. Cooney Jr. (JD ’78), and Kevin J. Conway (JD ’76), all alumni of the School of Law. Cooney & Conway, one of the country’s leading plaintiff’s personal injury law firms, is a national leader in catastrophic injury and mass tort litigation.

Civitas ChildLaw Center

UNICEF partnership provides learning opportunities in Africa

Loyola’s Civitas Childlaw Center continues to receive national and international recognition for its leadership in child law teaching, research, service, and policy. Bruce Boyer was honored this spring by the U.S. District Court for his work on a complex international child abduction case. Soledad McGrath joined the Center staff as a post-graduate fellow in policy and legislation. The ChildLaw Center said farewell to Amy Halbrook, its exceptional Salisbury post-graduate clinical fellow, and will welcome Miranda Johnson as its new Salisbury fellow in the fall.

One of the most exciting developments of the year was the ChildLaw Center’s entry into a formal partnership with UNICEF’s West and Central Africa Regional Office to train and support students to conduct juvenile justice assessments in the region. This summer, third-year student Josh Dankoff spent six weeks in Cameroon as part of the project. The ChildLaw Center continues its mission of preparing lawyers and other leaders to be effective advocates in its newly renovated office space on the 11th floor of the Corboy Law Center.

Beazley Institute for Health Law and Policy

Celebrating 25 years of excellence in health law, new online degree program

The Beazley Institute for Health Law and Policy commemorated its 25th anniversary with a year of... special events, including a conference this spring titled “Health Law: Reflections on the Past and Lessons for the Future,” which was followed by a celebration at the Loyola University Museum of Art. In May, the Beazley Institute graduated its first class of online master of jurisprudence (MJ) students. Loyola began offering the online MJ program in 2008 in partnership with Concord Law School, a leader in distance learning. This fall, the program has expanded to offer an online master of laws (LLM) in Health Law.

The Beazley Institute is pleased to welcome a new clinician to its faculty. Emily Benfer joined Loyola from Georgetown University Law Center. She will serve as director of Loyola’s new Health Justice Project, which is structured as a medical-legal partnership with Erie Family Health Center. The clinic will enable students to provide legal services to low-income residents on health care-related matters (watch for a feature story on the project in the fall issue of Loyola Law magazine). The Beazley Institute’s full-time faculty continues to evolve as leaders in the field by lecturing and publishing on a variety of new and expanding health law-related topics (also see faculty achievements, page 24). In addition, Senior Lecturer in Residence Barbara Youngberg’s book titled Principles of Risk Management and Patient Safety was published in August.

Other Areas of Focus

Institute for Consumer Antitrust Studies

Celebrating a decade of outstanding colloquia, fellowship opportunities

Loyola’s Institute for Consumer Antitrust Studies celebrated a banner year with the 10th anniversary of both its unique student fellowship program and its annual antitrust colloquium. This past year the institute also sponsored an exceptional lineup of interesting and diverse academic programs, speakers, and visiting scholars. In addition, the institute cosponsored conferences with the American Bar Association Antitrust Section, Haifa Law School, and the British Institute of International and Comparative Law.

The institute is a non-partisan, independent academic center designed to explore the impact of antitrust enforcement on the individual consumer and the public, and to shape policy issues. Papers and proceedings from the year’s innovative conferences can be found in special symposium issues of the Loyola Consumer Law Review, the Antitrust Law Journal, the Loyola University Chicago Law Journal, and the European Competition Journal. For more information, visit LUC.edu/antitrust.

International Law

U.S. Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia joins Loyola in Rome

For over 25 years, the School of Law has offered a four-week summer program of international and comparative law courses to students at Loyola’s John Felice Rome Center in Italy. This summer, U.S. Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia joined Dean David Yellen, students, and faculty in Rome as a special guest lecturer for two weeks in July. Justice Scalia taught a course on Separation of Powers and shared his perspective on the role of the three branches of government. His lectures were lively and entertaining as well as intellectually provocative.

This is the second year in a row that the School of Law has hosted a U.S. Supreme Court justice. In summer 2009, Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg was guest lecturer in the summer program in Rome.

In addition to its Rome summer program, the School of Law also offers a summer program in Beijing, China, and a one-week field study in Strasbourg, France.

Annual Patent Law Interview Program

Loyola continues to host the nation’s largest single-practice job fair

In July 2010, the School of Law welcomed more than 650 law students from more than 182 law schools and 104 legal employers from across the country to its annual Patent Law Interview Program. Launched in 1987, this two-day program in Chicago has brought together students with technical backgrounds and legal employers interested in hiring law clerks and entry-level attorneys for their patent or intellectual property practices.
Using Knowledge in the Service of Others

Committed to the Jesuit tradition of community service, the School of Law provides many opportunities for students to use their legal skills and understanding of social justice to help those in need. Last year, nearly 500 law students participated in some form of public interest work while attending law school at Loyola.

Public Interest Certificate Program Added to Curriculum Offerings

Recognizing that as the law evolves, specialization in public interest is becoming more important, Loyola has recently added a certificate program in this area. Students who complete four public interest classes, participate in a clinic or externship that serves low-income clients, engage in 30 hours of volunteer work, and enroll in a capstone public interest course will receive a Public Interest Certificate upon graduation.

Other Public Interest Highlights for 2009-10

Day of Service: During first-year orientation, incoming students volunteered their time in legal clinics, food pantries, community organizations, and Chicago public schools.

Annual Public Service Convocation: This annual event recognizes members of the Chicago community for their work in public interest.

Meet the Public Service Organizations Reception: Students from 11 area law schools met and talked with representatives from more than 65 organizations and governmental agencies that serve low-income clients or the public interest.

Martin Luther King Day Healthy Challenge: Loyola law students helped educate children from Chicago’s west side and western suburbs about fitness and nutrition.

Public Interest Law Society Auction: One of the law school’s most popular annual events, the auction raised over $26,000 last year to help provide stipends to students who work in unpaid public interest internships during the summer.

Inspiring Future Law Students: The School of Law provided opportunities throughout the year for over 250 Chicago public school students to visit the law school and attend various lectures, symposia, mock trial competitions, moot court arguments, and mentoring programs.

Legal Aid Online Live Help Hotline: Loyola law students contributed nearly 400 hours as operators, providing guidance to low-income clients utilizing the legal web site.
One of Loyola’s newest curricular options is a much-requested certificate program in public interest law.

Upgrading Facilities for Effective Learning

The first phase of the renovation and expansion of the Philip H. Corboy Law Center at 25 E. Pearson St. was completed last year. Floors 10 and 11 are now home to Loyola’s law clinics, the Dan K. Webb Center for Advocacy (see page 5), and the Power Rogers and Smith Ceremonial Courtroom (see page 5).

Phase two of the renovation was completed in summer 2010. The 12th floor of the Philip H. Corboy Law Center is now the new home for the law school’s administrative offices, including the dean’s office, admissions and financial aid, the registrar, and the advancement office. Two new classrooms are also included in the 12th-floor renovation.
The law school renovation improves technology and increases available classroom and administrative space.
Expanding Our Tradition of Faculty Excellence

Loyola law faculty members enjoy a reputation for excellence in publishing, speaking, and consulting. The School of Law continues to attract renowned scholars and teachers to its well-rounded faculty, anticipating legal trends by welcoming professors with expertise in emerging and increasingly significant areas of the law.

New Faculty

Robert John Araujo, S.J. joined Loyola’s law faculty last fall as the inaugural holder of Loyola’s John Courtney Murray, S.J., University Professorship. Father Araujo served as a trial attorney and advisor in the Solicitor’s Office of the U.S. Department of the Interior, and as a lawyer for the Standard Oil Co. He has served on the law faculty at Gonzaga University and Pontifical Gregorian University, and as a visiting professor at Georgetown University Law Center, St. Louis University School of Law, and Boston College School of Law.

Father Araujo has authored numerous law review articles on topics that include jurisprudence, public international law, Constitutional law, and Catholic legal theory. He has coauthored a series of books on papal diplomacy and international organizations with the late John A. Lucal, S.J. In addition, he has contributed chapters to a number of volumes addressing topics in jurisprudence and public international law.

Emily Benfer joined Loyola’s full-time law faculty this year as a clinical professor and director of the School of Law’s new Health Justice Project. The project was created to improve health care outcomes for low-income residents through direct representation, systemic advocacy, and strategic medical-legal partnerships with Chicago-area health care providers. Students in the clinic will employ a holistic and multifaceted approach to a client’s legal issues and engage in “preventive lawyering” by addressing a client’s problems before they proliferate.

Benfer comes to Loyola from Georgetown University Law Center, where she served as a supervising attorney and teaching fellow at the Federal Legislation and Administrative Clinic. Prior to joining Georgetown, she represented preschool-aged children with special education needs in a class action against the District of Columbia and completed an Arnold & Porter Equal Justice Works Fellowship at the Washington Legal Clinic for the Homeless. She specializes in clinical teaching, access to health and justice, and poverty law.

Samuel Brunson joined Loyola’s full-time law faculty in fall 2009. He most recently worked in the tax department of Willkie Farr & Gallagher LLP in New York. He also clerked for the Honorable George W. Miller on the U.S. Court of Federal Claims in Washington, D.C. He received a BA degree from Brigham Young University, and a JD degree from Columbia Law School. Brunson teaches Federal Income Tax and International Tax.

Nadia Sawicki joined Loyola’s full-time law faculty in fall 2009. Her primary areas of focus are bioethics and health law. She has written on a variety of topics, including professional discipline by state medical boards, the use of tort law as an incentive for appropriate medical treatment in end-of-life and reproductive care, and the medical community’s role in supporting public health efforts.

Prior to joining Loyola, Sawicki was the George Sharswood Fellow in Law and Bioethics at the University of Pennsylvania Law School, where she taught bioethics and public health law. She also served as a lecturer in the history and sociology of science at the University of Pennsylvania.

Emily Benfer
New faculty member
Nadia Sawicki is an expert in bioethics
Pennsylvania. She teaches Torts, Introduction to Health Law, and a seminar on Bioethics.

Barry Sullivan joined Loyola’s full-time faculty in fall 2009 as the law school’s inaugural Cooney & Conway Chair in Advocacy. Sullivan was a partner in the Chicago office of Jenner & Block and a longtime leader of its appellate and Supreme Court practice. He began his career as a law clerk to the legendary Judge John Minor Wisdom of the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, and he later served as an assistant to the U.S. solicitor general.

Visiting Faculty

Elizabeth M. Glazer joined Loyola as a visiting professor in fall 2009 from Hofstra Law School, where she is an associate professor of law and codirector of the Hofstra LGBT Rights Fellowship. Glazer’s research examines the topic of exclusion in the First Amendment, antidiscrimination law, and property law. She teaches courses in First Amendment, Jurisprudence, Property, Law & Sexuality, and Transactional Lawyering. While at Loyola, she taught courses in Property and Law & Sexuality.

Philipp Fabbio joined Loyola for the fall 2010 semester as a visiting professor from Italy. He is currently a professor of law at the University of Reggio Calabria, Italy, where he teaches commercial, antitrust, and IP law. He has served as a member of the full-time faculty at Sapienza University of Rome School of Law, and a visiting professor at Chicago-Kent School of Law and University of Verona School of Business, Italy.
